THE EXPRESSION OF SOCIAL COMMITMENT

University extension contributes to the consolidation of the comprehensive development of students and is regarded as a unique and contemporary factor that attracts people to the process of teaching and learning as it reinforces the integration between teaching, research and extension.

The development of actions of extension, as one of the forms of expression of Social Responsibility of PUCRS, intends to advance a changing education as the University can connect to other segments of society. This is maximized as extension actions are integrated into the curriculum. This facilitates the learning process as one has professional and interdisciplinary experiences.

Student Representation

The University recognizes the importance of student representation and policies as opportunities for learning and for the exercise of civic consciousness and comprehensive education. Established agreements provide the necessary funding for overseeing and supporting the activities. Students are also provided with spaces for cultural, social and sports actions, and the necessary actions for the election of the entities' leaders.

The 22 Student Centers and Academic Unions as well as the Central Student Directorate (DCE), all follow their own bylaws and representation in the University Council and the Board of each School. In 2017, 100 students served as leaders in the unions.

Vila Fátima University Extension Center

Located in the Bom Jesus Area, in Porto Alegre, the Vila Fátima University Extension Center is a health station that features medical doctors, nurses and orderlies. The fact of the Center being part of PUCRS makes it possible for a large number of undergraduate and graduate students to engage in activities every year, offering various resources to the community, in the area of social assistance and development, legal counseling, education and health.

In 2017, eight programs of PUCRS developed activities at the Center. Overall, there were 29,313 walk-ins and 212 counseling and support meetings were offered. The Program for Assistance of Bedridden Patients provided assistance to 597 patients in their homes.

SPECIAL FEATURES: EDUCATIONAL VOLUNTEERING

PUCRS is firmly engaged in the Marist actions of volunteering. It is educational in nature as it investigates and questions the sources of social inequalities. It is intended to understand, decode and create alternatives in view of the contexts of territorial and existential peripheries.

In 2017, 243 people took part in systematic activities. A total of 8,000 people have been benefited from these volunteering actions. Hence, giving the chance for people living different realities and different communities, and also other entities, to interact more in Marist areas is a good opportunity that the project offers as it is intent on providing comprehensive development as well as personal and social transformation.

Charity at Ilha da Pintada (Porto Alegre) brought together members of the Volunteering Project and Marista University Group.
